

This is an archive
of what was posted on the old GPEIG
web site in 2005

Progressive Regionalism in Global Perspective

Panel sponsored by GPEIG, October 27, 2005
ACSP Conference, Kansas City, Missouri
Preserving the Future (conference web site)

Panelists

Tom Angotti, Nico Calavita, Michael C. Neuman, Karina M. Pallagst
Moderator: Keith Pezzoli (Paper topics listed below)

Abstract

Over the past decade, interest in metropolitan/regional planning and the so-called new regionalism has been steadily rising. Some go so far as to characterize the heightened emphasis as an emerging movement (Wheeler 2002). Stefan Kipfer and Karen Wirsig examine the new regionalism from a critical perspective; they recently organized and published a review symposium titled, Progressive Regionalisms in North America. All five review essays published in the symposium concurred that "the latest version of the new regionalism is a useful entry point to discuss the political prospects for a progressive regionalism" (Kipfer and Wirsig 2004). But what does progressive mean in this context? How does progressive regionalism with its emphasis on politics, new institutionalism and governance factor into the sustainable development challenge facing city-regions in the context of globalization? The Progressive Regionalism in Global Perspective panel will address these and other key questions.

The term progressive is used in an increasingly wide range of academic, grassroots, institutional, policy and planning contexts. In addition to works titled progressive regionalism, one can find studies calling for progressive globalization, progressive governance, and progressive communications, among many other foci (Giddens 2003; Jacobs et al. 2003; Schroder et al. 2002; Sites 2004). But the term progressive is problematic. In recent years it has been used as a substitute for "Liberal." It often connotes a left-of-center approach to revitalizing social democracy (Etzioni 2004; Fung et al. 2003; Giddens 2003). Yet, globalization complicates matters. Familiar political categories of left verses right, and liberal verses conservative have blurred in some key respects. Interlocking problems of poverty, injustice, growth machine politics, consumerism and environmental degradation defy easy solutions; and there is no singular progressive champion to save the day. "Workers of the world unite" is a nice slogan, and it bears merit, but it is an insufficient measure on its own. The same can be said of hopes pinned solely on free market dynamics, the mobilization of civil society, regulatory innovation, technological magic, the entrepreneurial discipline of globe-girdling corporations, or the ingenuity of the so-called creative class. We are compelled to search for new understandings that are more nuanced, networked, systems-oriented, holistic, ecological, interactive and relational.

The intent of the Progressive Regionalism in Global Perspective panel is to bring together authors interested in unpacking the idea of progressive regionalism from both a theoretical and practical standpoint. Topics we hope to cover in the panel, from an explicit progressive and global perspective, include contributions of the new regionalism and new institutionalism. In addition to this, we hope to put the spotlight on new frontiers for progressive regionalism including, for instance, advances in the creation of regional information systems, sustainability science and technology, ethics and culture.

NOTE: Related to this panel, a roundtable concerning "Globalization and Progressive Imaginations" is also being proposed for the ACSP conference, to learn more visit the PI website, and/or blog.

Also Visit the Progressive Regionalism Blog, click here

---

Papers presented on October 27, 2005

A partial audio recording of this session is available (Tom Angotti's presentation, plus audience discussion: mp3 file, 20m).

(Also available: An audio tape of the related Roundtable on Globalization and the Progressive Imagination, mp3 file, 35m)

Multi-Scalar Large Institutional Networks in Regional Planning

Michael Neuman, Associate Professor and Chair, Sustainable Urbanism Program, Department of Landscape Architecture and Urban Planning Texas A&M University .

The End of the Growth Machine: New Requirements for Regional Governance in an Era of Shrinking Cities (pdf of this paper)

Karina Pallagst, Program Coordinator, Institute of Urban and Regional Development, University of California at Berkeley

New Anti-Urban Theories of the Metropolitan Region: “Planet of Slums” and Apocalyptic Regionalism (pdf of this paper)

Tom Angotti is Professor of Urban Affairs & Planning at Hunter College, City University of New York. He is Americas Editor for Planning Practice & Research, Co-editor of Progressive Planning Magazine , Participating Editor for Latin American Perspectives, and writes a monthly Land Use column at www.gothamgazette.com .

Regional Dynamics of Exclusion and Integration

Nico Calavita, Professor, City Planning, San Diego State University

---

REFERENCES

- Etzioni, Amitai. 2004. From empire to community: a new approach to international relations. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.
- Friedmann, John. 2002. The prospect of cities. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press.
- Friedmann, John. 1987. Planning in the public domain: from knowledge to action. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press.
- Fung, Archon, Erik Olin Wright and Rebecca Abers. 2003. Deepening democracy: institutional innovations in empowered participatory governance. London; New York: Verso.
- Giddens, Anthony. 2003. The progressive manifesto: new ideas for the centre-left. Cambridge, Malden, MA: Polity Press; Blackwell.
- Jacobs, Michael, Adam Lent and Kevin Watkins. 2003. Progressive globalisation: towards an international social democracy. London: Fabian Society.
- Kipfer, Stefan and Karen Wirsig. 2004. "Progressive Regionalisms in North America/ From Contradiction to Coherence? A Review Symposium on the US American "New Regionalism"." Antipode:728-732.
- Sandercock, Leonie. 1998. Making the invisible visible: a multicultural planning history. Berkeley: University of California Press.
- Schroder, Gerhard, Jurgen Kocka, Friedhelm Neidhardt and Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin fur Sozialforschung. 2002. Progressive governance for the XXI century: contribution to the Berlin conference: papers to the experts' conference. New York: Kluwer Law International.
- Sites, William. 2004. "Progressive Regionalism: A "Deliberative" Movement?" Antipode 36:766-778.
- Wheeler, S. 2002. "The new regionalism: Key characteristics of an emerging movement." Journal of the American Planning Association 68(3):267-278.

Links:

Planners Network

<http://www.plannersnetwork.org/pnetwork/www/>

Progressive Planning Magazine

<http://www.plannersnetwork.org/pnetwork/www/>

The Real Utopias Project

http://www.versobooks.com/series/real\_utopias.shtml

Progressive Directory, Institute for Global Communications (IGC)

<http://www.igc.org/index.html>

List of "Most Popular Progressive Websites", Published 6/30/04 by CommonDreams.org

<http://www.commondreams.org/headlines04/0630-20.htm>

RADIO POWER NETWORK, Progressive Talk Radio [ON AIR]

News, Commentary, Liberal Talk Shows, Exploring Progressive Politics & Culture

http://www.radiopower.org/liberal\_links.html

Activist Scholarship: Making Social Movement Theory Matter

<http://www-personal.si.umich.edu/~garrettk/SMSconference/>